Farmers Warned 'Support Rug' May Be Jerked

MONROE TOWNSHIP BOY WINS NATIONAL HEALTH CROWN

Ohio Farm Group Hears Sen. Aiken

Vermont Solon Backs Co-op Plan

COLUMBUS, Nov. 27—Sen. George D. Aiken, Vermont Republican, warned farmers today that "the price support rug may be pulled out from under the producers of any commodity."

One of the co-authors of the present national farm laws, the senator contended that price supports should be held to a "middle-of-the-road" basis.

He told the annual Ohio Farm Bureau Federation convention in Columbus that "any group of farmers who come to depend upon government funds for a substantial portion of their income is courting eventual disaster."

"There is always the likelihood that the price support rug may be pulled out from under the producers of any commodity, as has happened in the case of potatoes."

HOWEVER, Aiken contended that "we cannot afford to abandon support programs completely."

He recommended a long-range program to include adequate storage facilities.

As another angle, Aiken said the present shift toward an animal-type agriculture "holds far-reaching promise." He said this type of move "can mean a solution to the surplus problem."

Giving emphatic support to the cooperative program, Aiken said "there is no better example of democracy in the world today than the farmer-owned and farmer-controlled cooperative where all members have an equal voice."

The senator, one of the leading exponents of the St. Lawrence Seaway project, contended that the seaway will provide a "life line" to the iron ore supplies, provide great savings in shipping, and agriculture and benefit the Midwest in power economy.

Earlier, a federation spokesman cited the expansion of the bureau into a powerful farm bloc and growth of its multi-million dollar cooperative as the fulfillment of a goal set 33 years ago.

John W. Sims, executive secretary of the federation, outlined for the 33rd annual meeting of the group, the attainments of the organization.

On the subject of legislation, Sims pointed to the bureau's early support of the gasoline tax to relieve real estate owners of the burden of improving highways.

SIMS SAID the bureau led the fight to exempt the farmer from paying the three-percent sales tax on farm production supplies and for passage of the cooperative marketing act which permitted farmers to "organize" without prosecution under the anti-trust laws.

Taking a "bow" for its aid in developing rural electrification, the Farm Bureau pointed to its more recent support of the enactment of a strip mine rehabilitation bill in Eastern Ohio.

Citing the organization of 1,500 advisory councils of farmers throughout Ohio, Sims said the federation's establishment of Radio Station WRFD is one of the more recent accomplishments to reach many "city people who do not read our publications and who would have no other way to learn about our program."

He pointed further to the federation's public relations program to depict the farmer "as he really is" a small businessman taking all the risks of other enterprises with a few extras thrown in.

PUCO Studying Phone Rate Case

The pros and cons for an interim rate boost by the Ohio Consolidated Telephone Co., totaling $550,000, now are in the hands of the Public Utilities Commission of Ohio.

Testimony in the request concluded yesterday before the commission. The company claimed the increase is necessary to retain the utility's credit rating to borrow money for improvements.

Representatives of several of the cities (including Circleville) in the 24-county area served by the company protested that the firm wants the hike to convert a reported $1,000 loss into a $134,000 profit.

Taft On Tour

ASHEVILLE, N.C., Nov. 27—Sen. Taft, (R) O., fresh from an appearance before a congressional committee probing his election to the Senate in 1950, arrived in Asheville today for the beginning of a three-day North Carolina tour.

JOSEPH TUZAK points to 1939 scale prices on window of his restaurant in Detroit as he announces he'll stick to them. He says he's grossing $1,000 a day, has had to increase his staff considerably, and netted $500 the first week of the 1939 policy. The menu and prices on the window tell you why business is rushing with T-bone steaks $1.25, pork or lamb chops 55c, etc.

Ferguson Says $5 Million Spent To Reelect Taft

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—Ohio Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson charged today that more than $5 million were spent to reelect Sen. Taft, (R) Ohio, last year and called on Congress to limit campaign expenditures.

The Democrat, who was badly beaten trying to unseat Taft with organized labor's help, contended that a "poor man" or one of even moderate means can't afford to run for high public office.

Ferguson gave his views before a Senate elections subcommittee which already had heard Taft charge that Ferguson's backers spent three dollars to his one in the 1950 campaign.

Taft pointed with some pride to his own intensive Ohio campaign and told reporters his kind of "doorbell ringing" drive would apply to the presidential campaign in 1952. The senator is an announced candidate for the Republican presidential nomination.

Taft SAID he'd favor "every state" trying to follow his example in getting out the vote for a GOP presidential candidate.

Taft estimated his fair share of the Ohio GOP campaign bill at $600,000 or $700,000. He told the committee that a limitation on such spending should be based on the number of voters in a state, but later told newsmen he thought it would be more practical if it were based on population.

The senator figured his 1950 outgo ran to 10 cents a voter and thought that was fair.

Ferguson, who lost to Taft by 1,800 Gallons Gas Flood Road

A huge gasoline tank truck trail or overturned on Route 104 at the John Keller curve early Tuesday, flooding the highway with about 1,800 gallons of gasoline.

Franklin Meredith, 41, of Columbus, said he was traveling south with his twin-trailer rig and was shifting into fourth high gear when he noticed a drag.

He told Deputy Sheriff James Diltz that he stopped his rig and looked back to discover the second trailer had broken loose and overturned. The fuel did not ignite.

Tito Says Russia Is Chief Menace

BELGRADE, Nov. 27—Yugoslav Premier Marshal Tito described Russia today as "the chief menace to world peace" and said appeasement would only postpone war without preventing it.

Tito, speaking to the second general assembly of the International Federation of World Veterans, called on the vets to use their moral authority to preserve peace.

He described appeasement as "an erroneous calculation which will only postpone a conflict."

TOP AIDES OK BUFFER ZONE SETUP

UN Wants Inspection Right After Armistice Is Signed

MUNSAN, Nov. 27—United Nations truce delegates proposed today that military powers in Korea be frozen at armistice day levels and demanded the right to inspect Red military establishments in North Korea.

The Allies laid on the Panmunjom conference table a full-blown plan for supervision of the proposed armistice in Korea.

Communist delegates to the full-dress cease-fire conference took the plan for overnight study. The delegates will meet again at 11 a. m. tomorrow (9 p. m. Tuesday EST).

Korean Gen. Nam Il, Communist delegate, disclosed at Tuesday's session that the Reds have given up their former insistence on discussing at the armistice meeting withdrawal of all foreign troops from Korea.

The Red delegate said the question should be discussed at a "higher level" meeting convened after the armistice has been signed.

The negotiators met for only an hour and 40 minutes today, but ratified a subcommittee's solution of the buffer zone question and moved on to the next item on the agenda—establishment of a joint commission to police the armistice.

The delegation is working against a 30-day deadline set up by the subcommittee in its solution of the buffer zone issue.

The subcommittee agreed to draw a "provisional" cease-fire line along the present battlefield to be the center of a two-and-a-half mile wide buffer zone, however, the temporary line becomes permanent only if an armistice is signed within 30 days (by Dec. 27).

The shooting war will continue until the signing of the armistice, but Communist troops apparently took the agreement on the buffer zone as indication of a swift end to the war.

Shortly after agreement was reached on the problem Monday night showers of red, yellow, green and white flares zoomed into the air from Communist positions on the western front—presumably in celebration of the agreement.

A veteran Allied officer said he had never seen any such demonstration by the Reds before and he "guessed" the Communist soldiers were "very happy" about the agreement.

At Tuesday's cease-fire session, the first for the full delegation since Oct. 25, Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy, senior UN delegate, outlined the Allied high command's ideas on how a joint commission should be set up.

Joy stressed that there should be no entry into Korea of troops, military supplies or equipment after the armistice and that a joint inspection team should have free access to "all parts of Korea" — including Communist-held territory.

The Allied negotiator also suggested that the full delegation determine the principles for the issue and refer subordinate points to subcommittees for solution.

In order to speed up negotiations so an armistice can be reached by Christmas, Joy also suggested that each side order a prisoner of war census by nationality to lay the groundwork for discussions on exchange of prisoners.

Exchange of prisoners is the fourth item on the five-item agenda and discussion of this will follow settlement of the powers and make-up of a joint commission. The final agenda item is recommendations to the governments involved.

Iran To Argue Case Before World Court

TEHRAN, Nov. 27—Deputy Premier Hossein Fatemi said today that Premier Mohammed Mossadegh is ready to plead in person Iran's oil nationalization case before the International Court of Justice in The Hague.

Fatemi's announcement occasioned surprise since Iran has maintained that the court has no jurisdiction over the matter. The Tehran government claims the right to nationalize an industry is well within its sovereignty and not subject to international law.

However, Fatemi added that a petition is being prepared challenging the competence of the court to rule on the matter despite the willingness of the ailing Mossadegh to appear.

Fatemi coupled the announcement with a warning that Iran will sell its oil to the "Soviet bloc" if the Western world refuses to buy the oil produced by what once was the property of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Co.

Kefauver's Hat Half In Ring

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 27—Sen. Kefauver's hat was half way in the political ring today in the campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The Tennessee Democrat, who blew the lid off the nation's crime situation with his Senate Crime Investigating Committee, revealed that he was receptive to the nomination.

"I'm not running after the presidential nomination, but I'm not running away from it, either. I am watching developments."

GOP Dinner Said To Be Anti-Taft

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 27—A New York state Republican assemblyman today branded as "anti-Taft" the $100-a-plate GOP dinner in New York City Dec. 3.

Assemblyman Wilson C. Vanduzer of Middletown, often at odds with Governor Dewey, charged the dinner "is a fund raising affair to create a campaign chest to stop (Sen. Robert) Taft from getting the presidential nomination."

Dewey, who will preside at the dinner, and top New York GOP leaders are backing Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for the GOP presidential spot.

Guided Missile Test Range OKd In Caribbean

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—An agreement with the Dominican Republic gave the U. S. today a guided missile flight test range of almost 1,500 miles in the Caribbean.

The ten-year pact was signed in Ciudad Trujillo yesterday by U. S. Ambassador Ralph H. Ackerman and Dominican Foreign Secretary Virgilio Diaz Ordonez.

Permission to set up installations in the Dominican Republic will extend the range of operations at the U. S. Air Force missile-center at Cocoa, Fla.

Previous experiments were conducted under an agreement with the British which permitted tests over the Bahama Islands, an 800-mile long chain southeast of Florida.

By crossing the Dominican Republic, the open seas of the Caribbean will be available for an additional 600 miles in the approximate direction of Trinidad and the lesser Antilles.

How freely experiments can be conducted in the Caribbean area have not been revealed. Observers assume that, if any tested rockets are likely to come any too close to other areas, agreements will be sought with other nations.

Apparently to allay any apprehension in the Dominican Republic and nearby islands, the agreement specifically bans atomic explosions.

Uncanny 'Eye' Is Developed By Radio Firm

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—Radio Corporation of America has disclosed a new invention designed to spot and help intercept enemy planes at vast distances and even knock guided missiles out of the skies.

The invention, patented by RCA Board Chairman David Sarnoff, is said to combine the principles of television, radar, microwave relay and detection and direction finding. It uses equipment already developed, according to Dr. Elmer W. Engstrom, vice president in charge of RCA laboratories division. The invention can:

1. Detect enemy planes, ships or missiles "remote from the borders of a country."
2. Communicate running target positions instantaneously to a central command post at home.
3. Direct fighter aircraft to the detected enemy.
4. Intercept report and control signals from and to a guided missile and radiate identical signals either to jam the channel or counter-control the missile.
5. Establish an airborne radar net for national defense by equipping flights of U.S. aircraft with the new system.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 27—Contract negotiations vital to the economy of the entire nation began here today between the 1,400,000-member CIO United Steelworkers union and the U.S. Steel Corp.

A sixth-round pay increase is the chief demand among 22 which the union will place on the bargaining table. It is reported the union will battle for a package increase of 18 to 20 cents an hour.

Ron Rivers Honored At 4-H Parley

Youth's Record Is Outstanding

A Pickaway County youth has won a National 4-H Health Achievement Award, to be presented during sessions of the National 4-H Club Congress, which will close Thursday in Chicago.

He is Ronald Rivers, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Baxter R. Rivers of Monroe Township, who is representing Ohio as state health improvement champion at the National Congress.

Rivers will receive the award, a $100 Defense Bond and Blue Ribbon, Wednesday in Chicago.

Donor of the national health award is the Kellogg Company of Battle Creek, Mich.

Two other 4-H club boys received National Health Achievement Awards in Chicago, in addition to Rivers.

One of the most outstanding workers in the 4-H health field, Rivers ranked high in health improvement in both family and community categories.

THE 1950 graduate of Monroe Township high school put to use the improved health practices learned through his 4-H club projects.

His record as a leader in health improvement work in his own 4-H Club, the "Future Farmers of Monroe," as well as his adherence to recommendations put forth in the Pickaway County 4-H health program, helped him achieve this national honor.

Following county recommendations, Rivers set out to improve his personal health practices as well as those of his 4-H club. Realizing the importance of his personal health he changed his own health habits.

He formed good eating habits and has an annual physical and dental examination.

"I have learned that my health and safety are priceless," Rivers said in competing for state honors.

"These two things mean more to me than anything else in the world."

Health improvement did not stop at the personal level for Rivers. Through his efforts, the Rivers family and members of the 4-H club and his community were effected.

RIVERS' ACTIVE interest in sanitation resulted in his family's purchase of a milk cooler, testing of well water and the carrying out of a thorough fly control program.

In achieving his national championship, improvement of his own health habits plus work in health activities accounted for 50 per cent; health improvement work of his 4-H club accounted for 25 per cent, and results of the Pickaway County 4-H health program, 25 per cent.

Since graduation from high school, Rivers has been engaged in farming with his parents on their 612-acre farm in Monroe (Continued on Page Two)

Man, Woman Lose Driving Rights Here

Two more persons have lost their driving rights after appearing in Pickaway County common pleas court for drunk driving.

Earl Weaver, 39, of Columbus, suffered suspension of his driving rights for two years when appearing before the court.

And Madalyn Mason, 30, of New Holland, lost her driving rights for one year.

Weaver was deprived of his driving rights for two years, was fined $10 and costs and sentenced to 30 days in jail when appearing before the court. The jail term later was suspended in favor of probation.

The Columbus man was arrested last weekend on Route 23 north of Circleville by State Highway Patrolman S. J. Hobar.

Madalyn Mason lost her rights to drive for one year, was fined $10 and costs and sentenced to 30 days in jail also, with the sentence suspended for probation.

She was arrested last weekend in New Holland by Village Marshal Wilbur Frazier.

Both drunken drivers were brought before Judge William D. Radcliff on affidavits filed by Prosecutor Guy Cline.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 27—Sen. George D. Aiken, Vermont Republican, warned farmers today that "the price support rug may be pulled out from under the producers of any commodity."

HOWEVER, Aiken contended that "we cannot afford to abandon support programs completely."

He recommended a long-range program to include adequate storage facilities.

As another angle, Aiken said the present shift toward an animal-type agriculture "holds far-reaching promise." He said this type of move "can mean a solution to the surplus problem."

Giving emphatic support to the cooperative program, Aiken said "there is no better example of democracy in the world today than the farmer-owned and farmer-controlled cooperative where all members have an equal voice."

Time Said Here For Farmer To Make A Choice

COLUMBUS, Nov. 27—Murray D. Lincoln, president of the Farm Bureau insurance companies, told the farm group meeting here that "American farmers must choose between helping themselves through voluntary associations, or being helped by larger, more restrictive government programs."

He urged farmers to "throw off dependence on government programs" and to take the lead in establishing more cooperatives. He said:

"The farmers' problems cannot be solved with a few easy strokes of the pen or by a few government programs. Getting that kind of quick answer to immediate problems can hold us back on too many other fronts."

The ten-year pact was signed in Ciudad Trujillo yesterday by U. S. Ambassador Ralph H. Ackerman and Dominican Foreign Secretary Virgilio Diaz Ordonez.

Permission to set up installations in the Dominican Republic will extend the range of operations at the U. S. Air Force missile-center at Cocoa, Fla.

Previous experiments were conducted under an agreement with the British which permitted tests over the Bahamas Islands, an 800-mile long chain southeast of Florida.

By crossing the Dominican Republic, the open seas of the Caribbean will be available for an additional 600 miles in the approximate direction of Trinidad and the lesser Antilles.

How freely experiments can be conducted in the Caribbean area have not been revealed. Observers assume that, if any tested rockets are likely to come any too close to other areas, agreements will be sought with other nations.

Apparently to allay any apprehension in the Dominican Republic and nearby islands, the agreement specifically bans atomic explosions.

Man, Woman Lose Driving Rights Here

Weaver was deprived of his driving rights for two years, was fined $10 and costs and sentenced to 30 days in jail when appearing before the court. The jail term later was suspended in favor of probation.

The Columbus man was arrested last weekend on Route 23 north of Circleville by State Highway Patrolman S. J. Hobar.

Madalyn Mason lost her rights to drive for one year, was fined $10 and costs and sentenced to 30 days in jail also, with the sentence suspended for probation.

She was arrested last weekend in New Holland by Village Marshal Wilbur Frazier.

Both drunken drivers were brought before Judge William D. Radcliff on affidavits filed by Prosecutor Guy Cline.

Ron Rivers Honored At 4-H Parley

Youth's Record Is Outstanding

A Pickaway County youth has won a National 4-H Health Achievement Award, to be presented during sessions of the National 4-H Club Congress, which will close Thursday in Chicago.

He is Ronald Rivers, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Baxter R. Rivers of Monroe Township, who is representing Ohio as state health improvement champion at the National Congress.

Rivers will receive the award, a $100 Defense Bond and Blue Ribbon, Wednesday in Chicago.

Donor of the national health award is the Kellogg Company of Battle Creek, Mich.

Two other 4-H club boys received National Health Achievement Awards in Chicago, in addition to Rivers.

One of the most outstanding workers in the 4-H health field, Rivers ranked high in health improvement in both family and community categories.

THE 1950 graduate of Monroe Township high school put to use the improved health practices learned through his 4-H club projects.

His record as a leader in health improvement work in his own 4-H Club, the "Future Farmers of Monroe," as well as his adherence to recommendations put forth in the Pickaway County 4-H health program, helped him achieve this national honor.

Following county recommendations, Rivers set out to improve his personal health practices as well as those of his 4-H club. Realizing the importance of his personal health he changed his own health habits.

He formed good eating habits and has an annual physical and dental examination.

"I have learned that my health and safety are priceless," Rivers

The International Livestock Exposition's reserve champion in the polled Shorthorn class was Oakwood Predictor, owned by C. B. Teegardin and Sons of Ashville.

said in competing for state honors. "These two things mean more to me than anything else in the world."

Health improvement did not stop at the personal level for Rivers. Through his efforts, the Rivers family and members of the 4-H club and his community were effected.

RIVERS' ACTIVE interest in sanitation resulted in his family's purchase of a milk cooler, testing of well water and the carrying out of a thorough fly control program.

In achieving his national championship, improvement of his own health habits plus work in health activities accounted for 50 per cent; health improvement work of his 4-H club accounted for 25 per cent, and results of the Pickaway County 4-H health program, 25 per cent.

Since graduation from high school, Rivers has been engaged in farming with his parents on their 612-acre farm in Monroe (Continued on Page Two)

Township. He has a brother, Charles Edwin Rivers, 14.

His 4-H work was not limited to health activities. Rivers took an active interest in beef cattle, as a community project.

Rivers reasoned that his community, as well as the rest of the county was well adapted to raising beef.

In four years, from 1947 until 1951, Rivers raised and fitted a beef steer and three beef heifers, achieving "A" and "AA" grades on the projects.

THIS YEAR he also raised and fitted another beef heifer, receiving an "AA" rating.

Through his 4-H club projects he learned that purebred stock will fatten faster and bring better results. He also learned how to feed for larger gains and better profits, as well as the ability to show cattle in the ring.

Rivers found that his 4-H beef projects were best adapted to his community and its needs.

As vice-president of Future Farmers of Monroe the last four years, he participated in beef and general livestock judging, as well as judging practices at the Ohio State university field days.

Members of the Monroe club won second in the state judging contest in 1950, first and second at the field day, second in the state tractor rodeo, first in the county rodeo and first on the booth exhibit.

The club also had the healthiest boy and girl in Pickaway County, was first in county demonstrations for two years, and has been a banner club every year.

RIVERS HIMSELF participated in Monroe's music festival, cantata, and gave demonstrations on health, safety and cattle showing. He also took part in candlelight Easter services sponsored by the youth fellowship, a Christmas pageant, and took an active interest in school dramatics.

He attended the county 4-H camp at Tar Hollow in 1948 and 49, where he took part in vespers, camp fires, hiking trips, softball tournament and other games.

His work as a 4-H club leader is outstanding. Rivers helped younger members of his club prepare their exhibits for the county fair.

All during his 4-H career he helped get more young members interested in 4-H work, by talking with their parents and explaining the good work done by club members and the advantages of membership.

In his community he was active in church affairs, and served as president and later treasurer of the Young People's Society of the church. He is also a church steward. In Grange activities he served as gatekeeper in 1949.

Achievement of national honors came as no surprise to Rivers' friends and club associates and leaders who have observed his excellent work in the past.

Ag Research Makes Great Gains, Report

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 — The problem in agricultural research no longer is "can it be done?" but "what do we want, and how soon do we want it?"

These optimistic words came from Dr. Byron T. Shaw, U.S. deputy administrator of agricultural research, in a speech before a farm education group of the American Vocational Association meeting in Minneapolis.

Shaw said that if the housewife wants potatoes with shallow eyes or early apples that are red, she can get them. Or if she wants vegetables with more vitamins, plant breeders in every state will see that they are available.

The government expert pointed out some of the feats research has accomplished and what remains to be done if world food demands are to be met.

Shaw said that more than 30,000 plant diseases and 650 major types of insects still plague farmers. Moreover, he added, food consumption is going up as the population increases.

Data Shows Role Of Women In Modern World

COLUMBUS, Nov. 27—Women shape the hand that rocks the cradle, so the saying goes, and today are also shaping the cradle.

Litta K. Roberson, Home and community director of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, yesterday hurled this batch of statistics at delegates to the farm convention in Columbus:

Women today outnumber men by 1,709,000.

Women own more than 70 percent of private wealth; over 55 percent of savings accounts; over 50 percent of the stock of industrial corporations; over 33 percent of all utilities; over 44 percent of public industries and over 40 percent of real estate.

And they comprise 30 percent of the nation's labor force; pay more than 80 percent of the nation's inheritance taxes; still buy 63 percent of the men's neckties and cast 52 percent of the vote.

And, as all men know, they spend 85 percent of the total family income.

Guardian Angel Credited In Aid To Disabled B-36

FORT WORTH, Nov. 27—An Air Force pilot who believes in guardian angels described today the harrowing details of his heroic feat in bringing a crippled B-36 super-bomber safely back to its Texas base.

Capt. Clarence F. Horton of San Antonio circled Carswell Air Force base at Fort Worth for six and a half hours yesterday while his crew feverishly exhausted all possible means of repairing in flight the landing gear of the 10-engine sky giant which was damaged in take-off.

Then he ordered most of his 19-man crew to parachute to safety, but brought the big ship down in a perfect landing that could have ended at any moment in disaster and probable death for Horton and the co-pilot and flight engineer assisting him.

But the 28-year-old ship commander took events in stride and afterward commented simply: "There was somebody else pulling for us."

names, and "charged the cost to their newspaper advertising accounts." He said this was deductible for tax purposes and thereby amounted to forcing the government to "subsidize a candidate."

To Taft's charge that organized labor "poured" money into Ohio against him and for Ferguson, the Ohio official replied that labor's contributions were "insignificant" in comparison to industry's.

Ferguson also claimed that Taft "deliberately lied" when he testified that Ferguson's 1950 senatorial campaign had a Communist undertone.

Ferguson objected most to Taft's reference in testimony Monday that the Democratic campaign was "blueprinted by a Communist by the name of Gus Hall."

Ferguson said: "That is a deliberate lie and I think Mr. Taft knows it is a lie. The only Hall I know of in the whole campaign is a fellow by the name of Hall who was head of Taft's labor committee."

He added that "the only Communist or ex-Communist who came into Ohio that I know of was Ben Gitlow, who made several speeches for Mr. Taft."

9-Year Term Given For Theft Of $229,000

DAYTON, Nov. 27—A 49-year-old Dayton grandmother is under a federal sentence of nine years in prison today in connection with a missing $229,000 which went in part toward financing a gay honeymoon with a former West Coast football star.

Mrs. Bernice Emerick, former secretary-treasurer of the Wright Field Credit Union, changed her plea to guilty on certain charges when brought into federal court yesterday and was sentenced on 13 counts of embezzlement.

Federal Judge Robert Nevin said the term for each count would be served concurrently.

The actual charges involved "over" $127,000 which she was accused of embezzling and converting to her own use. But an audit of Mrs. Emerick's books turned up a shortage of $290,000.

Mrs. Emerick was arrested Aug. 3 in Los Angeles after a free-spending honeymoon with Dell Lyman, former UCLA football star and now a business man in Manhattan Beach, Cal., where he also is a member of the city council.

Special Design Homes For Aged Being Urged

NEW YORK, Nov. 26 — State Housing Commissioner Herman T. Stiehm of New York, foresees dwelling units for the aged with specially designed facilities for their comfort, safety and convenience in all future state-aided public housing projects.

The apartments for the elderly will include such features as bathrooms with non-slip floors, square bathtubs with seats and hand grips in the walls, mechanically operated windows, and low easy-to-reach cabinets and shelves.

SANTA TAKING A BEATING

Very Rugged Days Ahead For Old Gent From North

CHICAGO, Nov. 27—Santa Claus, who appears everywhere at the same time he personally answers letters from the North Pole, apparently is in for his most rugged season in history.

Even the bewhiskered gent's versatility and traditional Yuletide endurance may prove no match for the record crop of post-war babies now bouncing with six or seven years of energy.

Already he has lost a couple of rounds to the kiddies and his seasonal appearances have just begun.

In Chicago, the children were the chief component of a record Christmas shopping crowd in the loop. They came early and stayed late to greet Santa.

Typical reaction of the Chicago Loop Santa interviewed at several different locations was this comment:

"NOBODY LOVES children more than I do, but even Ole Nick gets tired. I had to drag out the lint bottle after all the lifting and handshaking I did."

On Chicago's northside, a traditional outdoor tree-trimming ceremony with Santa presiding got a traffic-jamming response.

Faulty Curtain Stops Drama

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—List a "temperamental" curtain today as a new reason for a play's failure to go on.

Last night's performance of "Saint Joan" in New York's Cort theater had to be called off because an asbestos curtain could not be raised. Mechanics worked on the hydraulic controls for 40 minutes while the star, Uta Hagen, and the other members of the cast fumed, but no luck. The near-capacity audience either got refunds or exchange tickets for another performance.

BUILT FOR USE

Some freezers are built just to sell. That's not the case, though, with Co-op or Unico freezers from Farm Bureau. Before a single cabinet was fabricated we surveyed hundreds of farmers, asking each farmer and farm wife their description of an ideal farm freezer. From this survey, the Unico 30 cubic foot freezer came into being. It contains all the most-asked-for features in a freezer—capacity, front opening doors, direct contact freezing, shelf arrangement, and many others.

We started with the Unico 30, because it was tailored to a waiting market, adding the sizes and types shown here until today Farm Bureau has the most complete line of farm and home freezers available. Thousands of Ohio families are living better, thanks to a Co-op or Unico freezer. You too can enjoy the convenience and economy of a freezer. It's your food bank, and we have a right-size model for everyone. The Unico 30 (left, above) holds approximately 1,200 lbs. frozen food. $699.50

The 15 cu. ft. Unico upright holds 600 lbs. frozen food. Has some beauty and convenience of Unico 30. Carries 5 year warranty, occupies little more floor space than average refrigerator. $469.50

Our newest upright—the Unico 22½ cu. ft. freezer. Holds 800 lbs. of frozen food, gives you more storage room for floor space occupied. Here's reach-in convenience, smart appearance, economical operation. $549.50

Our newest chest type freezers are the Co-op 9 cu. ft. (front) and the Co-op 15 (lid open). If your preference runs to chest models, here are outstanding values. The interiors are arranged for utmost convenience with a 2½ cu. ft. fast freeze compartment in both models. Baskets and dividers allow you to arrange interior to get the very most out of the space. Here's beauty and convenience you'll be proud to have in your own kitchen, and all Co-op freezers carry a 5 year warranty on the sealed unit.

THE FEAR OF FORCE

ANY PEACE officer worthy of the title administers the law, not through force, but through the fear of force. The badge he wears, the gun he carries, are symbols of his position, designed to impress the public with his police powers.

This nation's defense program is being operated largely upon the same theory. It is designed to inform the world that while this country favors peace, it intends to defend itself against any and all aggressors.

During the last war a strict censorship was maintained over war production. Today censorship is employed only to hide the transgressions of public officials. The number of planes, tanks and guns on order is announced with complete candor. At airplane factories bombers and jets stand in imposing array, for all to see and count.

There is little doubt that Communist agents have counted them, as they have other military production. Recently it was announced this country will send 3,000 tanks to France next year, keeping only 500 of the total production in this country. There was no effort to cloak this information in secrecy.

The principal purpose of the preparedness program is to impress the world with this country's present and potential military strength. To instill the fear of force, the United States has assumed the role of an international peace officer, wearing the badge and displaying the weapons incident to the office.

USES OF A CAVE

GOVERNMENT has again leased the fourteen-acre cave near Atchison, Kan., a former limestone quarry which the Department of Agriculture used after the war to store its dried eggs, rancid butter and so on in the interests of keeping prices high.

Efforts to get the government to say what the cave will be used for this time are unavailing. The Department of Agriculture says the information will have to come from elsewhere, which suggests that it won't be filled with surplus crops.

Parts of the cave have been used in the past for secret Army experiments. Whether such experiments are still under way is unknown.

When one thinks of caverns in these perilous times, one thinks of a refuge from storm or bomb. It is barely possible, of course, that some of the influence boys, the five per centers, the income tax fixers, the fellow travelers in government feel the need of a haven which would be most welcome to them should public sentiment against conniving and corruption in government begin to resemble an A-bomb.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

Democrats, New Dealers, internationalists, and other non-Republicans have for many years been thinking out loud as to what the Republican Party should do about its candidates and platforms. Now Harry Truman joins the ranks of Republican advisers.

This time the advice is not likely to be taken, no matter who the candidate is. The pressure is too forceful. Even were General Eisenhower the candidate, he could not prevent a discussion of the foreign policy. He must encounter a convention that will insist upon dealing with the following subjects:

1. The advance of socialism in the United States;
2. Extravagance, waste, dishonesty and subservience in government;
3. The failure of the American foreign policy in Asia and in Europe, and its costliness to the American taxpayer of this and succeeding generations;
4. The failure of the Marshall Plan to build adequately strong allies in Western Europe;
5. The failure of the Korean war because of cowardly policies in Washington.

It is impossible to dodge these issues from the Republican standpoint because they control our domestic as well as foreign affairs. The delegates who will attend the Republican convention will come from constituencies which demand that these questions be dealt with. Each delegate will know that he has to face angry men, who will not come to the polls to vote if the issues are dodged. The refusal to vote has become a serious matter for this party.

When President Truman invited Herbert Hoover to head a commission to deal with the problem of the reorganization of the executive branch of the government, it was generally assumed that Truman sincerely intended to save money and increase efficiency. The Hoover Commission did a magnificent job.

The results in the implementation of the Hoover reports are trivial. As soon as the political side of the executive was touched, it reacted with shocking sensitivity. The Postoffice Department, which is now startlingly inefficient and of decreasing service, responded as though the suggested changes were as subversive as a Communist in the State Department. Similarly, the Agriculture Department and the welfare agencies took on hysterical jerks.

Hoover's stature in the Republican Party in 1951 is very different from what it was in 1940 when the microphones were spiked so that he could not be heard in Convention Hall. He has become a beloved figure. When he stands before the convention in Chicago next July, no one will forget how he was kicked around by a crowd of politicians who, one by one, are being proved to have been crooked by committees of Congress chaired by members of their own party.

And it must be remembered that Gen. Douglas MacArthur will address that convention. No combination of internationalists, dominated by New York banks with London affiliations, will be able to keep him off the convention program.

Again the convention in July will be different from that four years ago when a handful of stalwarts insisted upon nominating MacArthur for the presidency, although he remained in Tokyo and avoided political entanglements. This year, he comes, after having moved huge audiences to an acceptance of his moral leadership (Continued on Page Seven)

CHAPTER THIRTY

TO EACH compliment about her party, Mollie had mentioned her indebtedness to Clara. She did to Nicholas, the next morning, when he met her on the lake between Shriners and Children's.

"Liz Ragdale heaped, too," he pointed out. "That was a very interesting show. I'm glad I saw that family in operation. I didn't know you'd asked them."

"I'm sorry I didn't tell you."

He glanced at her in protest.

"I am touchy," she admitted quickly. "Sometimes I wonder what's wrong with me."

"Want a diagnosis?" His eyes were bright.

"I do not," she laughed. "I asked the Ragdales because I wasn't sure they'd come."

"One of 'em was dragged," he agreed.

"My party wasn't that important."

"Oh, I don't suppose those two agree on anything. I've sensed their conflict just seeing them casually. That's why I particularly enjoyed yesterday's performance—because it was an act, on Liz's part. Very well done, too."

"A I cared about was the way she rescued me—she, and Clara."

"Yep, Clara, too. It was, all in all, quite a party, but please, Mollie, don't let me walk in again, unprepared, on doilies and angel food. I'm too old for shocks like that."

"Are you coming in here?" she asked, indicating the door to Children's.

"I'll walk through—I'm going over to Boone. And I meant to look you up to ask if you'd assist me on the lecture I'm giving this afternoon."

"Are you demonstrating?"

"I am."

"Then of course I'll assist. What time is it?"

"Supper'll tell you. Thanks, Mollie."

She looked at him in surprise.

"Why, Nicholas, you know—"

"I don't know anything," he said crossly. "Things are all mixed up for me, too, Mollie. It hit me pretty hard yesterday to come into your place and find Clara in charge."

"Didn't you know that Hazel...?"

"Sure I knew. Sylvester and I spent hours yesterday on-the-mark-get-set-go-to-go to come help you. But you didn't ask. It was—well—deflating. To both of us. We had hoped we were somewhat indispensable. He eyed her questioningly. She bit her lip and said nothing.

Nicholas opened the heavy inner door for two nurses who came through the vestibule; he and Mollie acknowledged their greetings.

"Women are many things, Mollie," he said when they were alone again, "but I've never considered them especially gifted as friends. I think the qualities which make them women guarantee the impossibility of the other status. And rightly so. Take friendship—to be a friend, there must be dependence. And," his voice snapped, "if you're ready to claim that you can depend on Clara—My soul, Mollie!"

"That may apply to Clara, Nicholas. But I was your friend once, and—"

"Oh, no, you weren't," he broke in. "Not from my point of view."

"Oh, Nicholas..." she cried, still baffled by this change in him whom she had thought she knew so well. He sensed her confusion and laughed at her.

"Don't fret about it, Mollie," he urged.

"I fret about you," she assured him. "I used to think you liked me—"

"I did. And here it was again, that disturbing intensity."

"But now—" She looked up at him, frowning and laughing, too. "Nothing I do pleases you."

"That's true," he agreed readily. "And you don't like criticism. But certainly you can understand a certain amount of present captiousness on my part."

"Look, Nicholas. Let's get this straight—"

"Oh, let's not!"

"But when you criticize me, you should let me explain—"

"I shouldn't criticize you," he agreed, "unless I do let you explain, but we'll fix that this way, Mollie: you go along and do what you want, be what you want—and if that includes friendship with Clara, I'll be Johnny-on-the-spot with my criticism!" He made an awful face. "But do watch her, darling," he said earnestly.

"Good morning, Burke," said Dr. Cowan.

"Morning, Burke," murmured Mollie, flushing that she had mimicked Nicholas and had not said Doctor. But she was upset. Nicholas upset her always these days.

"I think, Nicholas," she snapped, when Burke had taken his ears out of range, "that you'd be happier, and I know I would be, if you'd stop being so cynical on every subject! That attitude gets a little wearying when it extends to anything so simple as a neighborly gesture."

She jerked at the inner door's handle, and Nicholas took the weight from her. "Will you go to the ballet with me on Saturday night?" he asked quietly.

She turned her head sharply to look at him, her hair spraying against her cheek. "No," she said abruptly. "I can't."

"Don't put, Mollie," he waited for her to precede him into the elevator.

"I'm not putting!"

"Ho, ho!" he challenged. "What was it then? Answer me that after you tell me why, whatever button I punch on this thing, I always end up in the basement?"

Mollie laughed, and pushed his hand away from the indicator panel. "Let me do that," she urged. "I'm late as it is. What floor do you want, Dr. Cowan?"

"But, Mollie, I bought two tickets!"

The elevator grille slid back. "I've warned you before about wasting your money, Nicholas," she said severely. "Bye, now. See you this afternoon."

He said something which the door closed. Mollie went on down the corridor, smiling at his probable retort and at the pleasure which was hers whenever she thought about the date she had for Saturday night.

That date was with Peter. He had explained at some length why his mother was coming to see him two whole weeks after Christmas rather than on the day itself. But Christmas was fatiguing to the owner of a busy dress shop, then there was the matter of inventory and after-Christmas sales. But this week-end was to be their Christmas together, and Peter especially wanted Mollie and his mother to meet.

Mollie had immediately suggested that Peter bring Mrs. Shepherd to dinner at her apartment—and Peter as immediately had demurred. He'd made various excuses, all of them evasions of his real reason which was only revealed to Mollie when, at last, she met Mrs. Shepherd.

Her apartment, it seemed, was too "different"; in it, Mollie was too definitely a career woman. But that revelation was to come later.

When Peter made a special point of inviting her to meet his mother, she had been as excited as any girl of eighteen. They'd have dinner, he said, at the hotel, just the three of them; he'd come by for Mollie. She objected, his time would be short, she'd meet them in the lounge. Should she dress?

"Not too much," said Peter. He wasn't wearing a tux, he explained.

But Mollie did "dress" to the extent of being exceedingly careful in the selection of her costume.

She wanted to be as elegant for Peter, but his odd manner about her apartment warned her to avoid the sensational, to be smart, but not too smart, and to expend her energy on grooming rather than on more obvious appeals for attention. Coming into the hotel, with Peter approaching, lifting her fur coat from her shoulders, his anxious eyes made her wonder if he had wanted to fetch her so that he might check on her appearance, be sure—

She turned in a full circle before him. "Look all right?" she asked, smiling a little. She knew that she did; her green taffeta suit, the spray of lilies of the valley on one lapel, her tiny skull cap of green, her slippers, gloves—whatever Mrs. Shepherd was, she could scarcely be called (To Be Continued)

THE FEAR OF FORCE

ANY PEACE officer worthy of the title administers the law, not through force, but through the fear of force. The badge he wears, the gun he carries, are symbols of his position, designed to impress the public with his police powers.

This nation's defense program is being operated largely upon the same theory. It is designed to inform the world that while this country favors peace, it intends to defend itself against any and all aggressors.

During the last war a strict censorship was maintained over war production. Today censorship is employed only to hide the transgressions of public officials. The number of planes, tanks and guns on order is announced with complete candor. At airplane factories bombers and jets stand in imposing array, for all to see and count.

There is little doubt that Communist agents have counted them, as they have other military production. Recently it was announced this country will send 3,000 tanks to France next year, keeping only 500 of the total production in this country. There was no effort to cloak this information in secrecy.

The principal purpose of the preparedness program is to impress the world with this country's present and potential military strength. To instill the fear of force, the United States has assumed the role of an international peace officer, wearing the badge and displaying the weapons incident to the office.

USES OF A CAVE

GOVERNMENT has again leased the fourteen-acre cave near Atchison, Kan., a former limestone quarry which the Department of Agriculture used after the war to store its dried eggs, rancid butter and so on in the interests of keeping prices high.

Efforts to get the government to say what the cave will be used for this time are unavailing. The Department of Agriculture says the information will have to come from elsewhere, which suggests that it won't be filled with surplus crops.

Parts of the cave have been used in the past for secret Army experiments. Whether such experiments are still under way is unknown.

When one thinks of caverns in these perilous times, one thinks of a refuge from storm or bomb. It is barely possible, of course, that some of the influence boys, the five per centers, the income tax fixers, the fellow travelers in government feel the need of a haven which would be most welcome to them should public sentiment against conniving and corruption in government begin to resemble an A-bomb.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

Democrats, New Dealers, internationalists, and other non-Republicans have for many years been thinking out loud as to what the Republican Party should do about its candidates and platforms. Now Harry Truman joins the ranks of Republican advisers.

This time the advice is not likely to be taken, no matter who the candidate is. The pressure is too forceful. Even were General Eisenhower the candidate, he could not prevent a discussion of the foreign policy. He must encounter a convention that will insist upon dealing with the following subjects:

1. The advance of socialism in the United States;
2. Extravagance, waste, dishonesty and subservience in government;
3. The failure of the American foreign policy in Asia and in Europe, and its costliness to the American taxpayer of this and succeeding generations;
4. The failure of the Marshall Plan to build adequately strong allies in Western Europe;
5. The failure of the Korean war because of cowardly policies in Washington.

It is impossible to dodge these issues from the Republican standpoint because they control our domestic as well as foreign affairs. The delegates who will attend the Republican convention will come from constituencies which demand that these questions be dealt with. Each delegate will know that he has to face angry men, who will not come to the polls to vote if the issues are dodged. The refusal to vote has become a serious matter for this party.

When President Truman invited Herbert Hoover to head a commission to deal with the problem of the reorganization of the executive branch of the government, it was generally assumed that Truman sincerely intended to save money and increase efficiency. The Hoover Commission did a magnificent job.

The results in the implementation of the Hoover reports are trivial. As soon as the political side of the executive was touched, it reacted with shocking sensitivity. The Postoffice Department, which is now startlingly inefficient and of decreasing service, responded as though the suggested changes were as subversive as a Communist in the State Department. Similarly, the Agriculture Department and the welfare agencies took on hysterical jerks.

Hoover's stature in the Republican Party in 1951 is very different from what it was in 1940 when the microphones were spiked so that he could not be heard in Convention Hall. He has become a beloved figure. When he stands before the convention in Chicago next July, no one will forget how he was kicked around by a crowd of politicians who, one by one, are being proved to have been crooked by committees of Congress chaired by members of their own party.

And it must be remembered that Gen. Douglas MacArthur will address that convention. No combination of internationalists, dominated by New York banks with London affiliations, will be able to keep him off the convention program.

Again the convention in July will be different from that four years ago when a handful of stalwarts insisted upon nominating MacArthur for the presidency, although he remained in Tokyo and avoided political entanglements. This year, he comes, after having moved huge audiences to an acceptance of his moral leadership (Continued on Page Seven)

CHAPTER THIRTY

TO EACH compliment about her party, Mollie had mentioned her indebtedness to Clara. She did to Nicholas, the next morning, when he met her on the walk between Shriners and Children's.

"Liz Ragdale helped, too," he pointed out. "That was a very interesting show. I'm glad I saw that family in operation. I didn't know you'd asked them."

"I'm sorry I didn't tell you."

"He glanced at her in protest."

"I am tough!" she admitted quickly. "Sometimes I wonder what's wrong with me."

"Want a diagnosis?" His eyes were bright.

"I do not!" she laughed. "I asked the Ragdales because I wasn't sure they'd come."

"One of 'em was dragged," he agreed.

"My party wasn't that important."

"Oh, I don't suppose those two agree on anything. I've sensed their conflict just seeing them casually. That's why I particularly enjoyed yesterday's performance—because it was an act, on Liz's part. Very well done, too."

"All I cared about was the way she rescued me—she, and Clara."

"Yep, Clara, too. It was, all in all, quite a party, but please, Mollie, don't let me walk in again, unprepared, on doilies and angel food. I'm too old for shocks like that."

"Are you coming in here?" she asked, indicating the door to Children's.

"I'll walk through—I'm going over to Boone. And I meant to look you up to ask if you'd assist me on the lecture I'm giving this afternoon."

"Are you demonstrating?"

"I am."

"Then of course I'll assist. What time is it?"

"Suppose I tell you. Thanks, Mollie."

She looked at him in surprise.

"Why, Nicholas, you know—"

"I don't know anything," he said crossly. "Things are all mixed up for me, too, Mollie. It hit me pretty hard yesterday to come into your place and find Clara in charge."

"Didn't you know that Hazel..."

"Sure I knew. Sylvester and I spent hours yesterday on-the-mark-get-set-go-to-go to come help you. But you didn't ask. It was well-defeating. To both of us. We had hoped we were somewhat indispensable. He eyed her questioningly. She bit her lip and said nothing.

Nicholas opened the heavy inner door for two nurses who came through the vestibule; he and Mollie acknowledged their greetings. "Women are many things, Mollie," he said when they were alone again, "but I've never considered them especially gifted as friends. I think the qualities which make them women guarantee the impossibility of the other status. And rightly so. Take friendship—to be a friend, there must be dependability. And," his voice snapped, "if you're ready to claim that you can depend on Clara—My soul, Mollie!"

"That may apply to Clara, Nicholas. But I was your friend once, and—"

"Oh, no, you weren't," he broke in. "Not from my point of view."

"Oh, Nicholas..." she cried, still baffled by this change in him whom she had thought she knew so well. He sensed her confusion and laughed at her.

"Don't fret about it, Mollie," he urged.

"I fret about you," she assured him. "I used to think you liked me—"

"I did." And here it was again, that disturbing intensity.

"But now—" She looked up at him, frowning and laughing, too. "Nothing I do pleases you."

"That's true," he agreed readily. "And you don't like criticism. But certainly you can understand a certain amount of present captiousness on my part."

"Look, Nicholas. Let's get this straight—"

"Oh, let's not!"

"But when you criticize me, you should let me explain—"

"I shouldn't criticize you," he agreed. "Unless I do let you explain, but we'll fix that this way, Mollie: you go along and do the way you want, be what you want—and if that includes friendship with Clara, I'll be Johnny-on-the-spot with my criticism!" He made an awful face. "But do watch her, darling," he said earnestly.

"Good morning, Burke," said Dr. Cowan.

"Morning, Burke," murmured Mollie, flushing that she had mimicked Nicholas and had not said Doctor. But she was upset. Nicholas upset her always these days.

"I think, Nicholas," she snapped, when Burke had taken his ears out of range, "that you'd be happier, and I know I would be, if you'd stop being so cynical on every subject! That attitude gets a little wearying when it extends to anything so simple as a neighborly gesture."

She jerked at the inner door's handle, and Nicholas took the weight from her. "Will you go to the ballet with me on Saturday night?" he asked quietly.

She turned her head sharply to look at him, her hair spraying against her cheek. "No," she said abruptly. "I can't."

"Don't put Mollie," he waited for her to precede him into the elevator.

"I'm not putting!"

"Ho, ho!" he challenged. "What was it then? Answer me that after you tell me why, whatever button I punch on this thing, I always end up in the basement?"

Mollie laughed, and pushed his hand away from the indicator panel. "Let me do it," she urged. "I'm late as it is. What floor do you want, Dr. Cowan?"

"Oh, I wanted the basement."

Mollie laughed aloud, something almost her usual self. "Then I'll go to third, and leave you to your fate. About Saturday, Nicholas. I'm sorry, but I'm going to be busy that evening."

"But, Mollie, I bought two tickets!"

The elevator grille slid back. "I've warned you before about wasting your money, Nicholas," she said severely. "Bye, now. See you this afternoon."

He said something which the door silence, Mollie went on down the corridor, smiling at his probable retort and at the pleasure which was hers whenever she thought about the date she had for Saturday night.

That date was with Peter. He had explained at some length why his mother was coming to see him two whole weeks after Christmas rather than on the day itself. But Christmas was fatiguing to the owner of a busy dress shop, then there was the matter of inventory and after-Christmas sales. But this week-end was to be the Christmas together, and Peter especially wanted Mollie and his mother to meet.

Mollie had immediately suggested that Peter bring Mrs. Shepherd to dinner at her apartment—and Peter as immediately had demurred. He'd made various excuses, all of them evasions of his real reason which was only revealed to Mollie when, at last, she met Mrs. Shepherd.

Her apartment, it seemed, was too "different" in it, Mollie was too definitely a career woman. But that revelation was to come later.

When Peter made a special point of inviting her to meet his mother, she had been as excited as any girl of eighteen. They'd have dinner, he said, at the hotel, just the three of them; he'd come by for Mollie. She objected, his time would be short, she'd meet them in the lounge. Should she dress?

"Not too much," said Peter. He wasn't wearing a Tux, he explained.

But Mollie did "dress" to the extent of being exceedingly careful in the selection of her costume.

She wanted to be as elegant for Peter, but his odd manner about her apartment warned her to avoid the sensational, to be smart, but not too smart, and to expend her energy on grooming rather than on more obvious appeals for attention.

Coming into the hotel, with Peter approaching, lifting her fur coat from her shoulders, his anxious eyes made her wonder if he had wanted to fetch her so that he might check on her appearance, be sure—

She turned in a full circle before him. "Look all right?" she asked, smiling a little. She knew that she did; her green tulle dress, the spray of lilies of the valley on one lapel, her tiny skull cap of green, her slippers, gloves—whatever Mrs. Shepherd was, she could scarcely—

Kiernan's ONE MAN'S OPINION

Mr. Truman says: "I'm not going to make any announcement yet about who the candidate will be." So there's no reason for the delegates to start packing for Chicago.

Some of them were under the impression they were going to pick the candidate, but all they have to do now is wait for the announcement.

This means that a fellow can go to Chicago this year and not have to sit through those tedious nominating sessions.

Meanwhile, my barber says he doesn't think he's one of the "special interests" Harry belabors, but he wishes the President would name them so he would know.

If you went to the cops with a story of a bad man on the loose they would want his name. Harry goes to the country with a story of a whole group of bad men threatening our national security and identifies them only as "special interests."

How can you hang a picture labeled "special interests" on the postoffice wall and expect they will be captured without even knowing the color of their eyes?

Try, Stop Me

A clothing merchant sat listlessly on a porch chair at a Catskill resort, his face the very picture of dejection. "So why are you looking so sad?" chided a friend. "Didn't your uncle die two months ago and leave you a couple hundred thousand?" "Granted," said the downcast one. "And furthermore, didn't another relative pass away last month and leave you a quarter of a million more?" FACTS ABOUT MONEY!

IRON MONEY

Iron money was never practical because it took too ponderous a chunk of it to make any sizable purchase. For this reason the Spartan king, Lycurgus, made iron the lawful money of Sparta reasoning that his subjects would be discouraged in making trade a life ambition and hence devote their lives to the arts of war.

By MEL HEIMER

Hedy Lamarr

NEW YORK—It is given to some men more than others to understand women. This is not to be taken as a comment that any man understands any woman, since this obviously is a ridiculous statement. However, some get a little closer to the real nature of the strange wild creature, sometimes because of extra perceptivity, sometimes because of the nature of their work. Aaron Kaye is a good example of this last. It is likely he knows more about the real inner thoughts of New York women than any other man, just because of his work.

Mr. Kaye, a fascinating man who practices yoga, writes poems and composes an occasional fable or two, is the owner of a big "thrift shop"—maybe the biggest of its kind anywhere—and as such he buys and sells more mink coats than anyone in the United States.

A new mink coat is a wistful dream, and only that, to most women, even here in New York. A used mink is something a little closer to home, something a girl actually can picture herself owning, if she goes without lunch, saves money by not going to the movies, nags her husband enough or lies, cheats and steals in sufficient quantities. Men have a habit of looking on women with one view or another. Either they think girls are dreamy, filmy sacred vessels whose thoughts are gossamer and whose character is pure carved ivory, or they think all women are schemers lying in ambush with drawn knives for the next man along.

Mr. Kaye, by virtue of his business, knows they are a little of each; in other words, they are people. A woman's life—her joys, her sorrows, her tragedies and great love affairs—can be moulded toward the purchase of a used mink coat. As a man who earns a dollar every so often writing about women and their assorted emotions, I envy Mr. Kaye his profession.

MR. KAYE IS THE MAN who went up to the Klondike during the gold rush and made money not by panning but by selling eggs at $2 each. These profits he gambled away, after which he tried mining and didn't like it, and then he launched a fur company.

The 1929 depression wiped out his own personal fortune, so he borrowed $1,000 and opened his first "thrift shop." He ultimately had four of them operating and today he has them consolidated in one building.

As a man who carries more minks in stock than most of the major stores in Manhattan lumped together, Mr. Kaye likes to look on himself almost as a patron saint of the mink-dreamers.

Aaron sells his used furs at what seem to be fractions of their original costs and he likes to tell of the time a waitress walked into his shop with a bulging valise, picked out the mink she wanted and then opened the valise and spilled out $850 in nickels, dimes and quarters—all her tips—on the floor.

On still another occasion, a dowager-with-a-stomacher type of woman pulled up to the store in a limousine with a chauffeur and strode determinedly in with four furs over her arm. "I want $950 for these coats and no arguments," she said flatly. Mr. Kaye wrote her out a check for $950 and bid her good day. "I would have given her $1,500 for them," he says philosophically, "but the customer is always right."

MR. KAYE GETS HIS MINKS from any and every old place, tracking them down to the four corners of the earth, including Brooklyn, if necessary. For example, when Hedy Lamarr decided to wipe the slate clean and sell all her personal effects as a prelude to beginning a brave, new world with a brave, new husband, Mr. Kaye went to Hollywood for the auction and bought 98 per cent of the Lamarr furs.

He also bought a goodly portion of her underwear and one of those historic items, an evening gown with built-in you-know-what, but at last reports he hadn't offered this for sale at his shop.

Mr. Kaye also recently bought most of the furs of Linda Christian, a movie performer married to an actor named Power, all of which helps to keep him on the throne as (in his own words), America's "slightly used fur king."

A SET OF ASH trays in Franciscans would make an ideal gift for the small fry to give mother for Christmas. These handy and necessary items are very modestly priced from 35c to $3 each at the L. M. Butch Co., Jewelers. Another nice gift would be ash trays in Fostoria glassware that are surprisingly low in cost, starting at 45c each.

A WIDE GENUINE leather

Hickock belt in black, brown or tan with contrasting square silk scarf would make a gift that would not be too personal. Belts are priced from $1.50 up and scarves start at $3 at the Caddy Miller Hat Shop. A warm wool muffler is only $2.50.

Horton Smith Slated To Get Top PGA Post; Big Tourneys Pondered

CHICAGO, Nov. 27—Horton Smith, pro golfer now turned executive, probably will be elected president of the Professional Golfers' Association today and on his own admission certainly will not lack for funds.

The PGA presumably could apply for Marshall Plan money since it does business on an international front, but as long as so-called "rugged individualists" like George S. May of Chicago and John J. Hopkins of Washington, D. C., are around that apparently will not be necessary.

May has guaranteed the PGA $100,000 for his two-week "All-American" and "World Championship of Golf" tournament at Tam C'Shanter next August and Hopkins has come up with a liberal offer for a Canadian vs. U. S. golf pro team tournament beginning next Summer.

The Hopkins offer has intriguing angles. The wealthy industrialist is president of the Electric Boat Co. and head of the Canadair Air Line.

HE PROPOSES a match model after the British vs. American Ryder Cup tournament pitting two teams involving the cream of the crop.

But since Canada has only a few top world players, Ken Murray, head of the Canadian PGA, has suggested that Canada draw on the best golfers in the British empire for inclusion on its 10-man team.

Hopkins has guaranteed that he will pay each of the 20 men playing on the U. S. and Canadian teams $500 in addition to all expenses traveling to the tournament point.

Hopkins has suggested September as the date of the first Canadian vs. U. S. match—just two weeks after the Tam O'Shanter venture.

Since most of the boys will be in America anyway at the Tam tournaments they will be almost in commuting distance of Montreal, which

No Soft Spots Ahead In Browns Football Menu

CLEVELAND, Nov. 27—The Cleveland Browns will get no chance to let up when they wind up their 1951 National Football League home schedule against the Chicago Cardinals Sunday.

Coach Paul Brown's gridders have subdued the Philadelphia Eagles, New York Giants and Chicago Bears in last three weekends, but the Cardinals are expected to pose as much of a problem as any of the other three.

In fact, the Browns have no soft spots in the remainder of their schedule in which they must meet the Pittsburgh Steelers and the Eagles as well as the Cards.

If the Browns win their next two games they will clinch the American Conference title before the clash with the Eagles.

However, after seeing what a couple of underdogs did over the weekend, the Cleveland mentor is not taking either the Cards or the Steelers lightly.

"Everyone is getting beaten when they aren't supposed to this season," said Brown. "It seems almost inevitable that it will happen to us."

The Browns defeated the Cardinals 34-17 in their first meeting this season, but with a few breaks, the game could have gone the other way for the Cardinals.

Gavilan, Bratton Ready For Bout

CHICAGO, Nov. 27—Kid Gavilan, welterweight boxing champion of the world, and Johnny Bratton, are reported in shape today for their 10-round non-title match tomorrow night in Chicago Stadium.

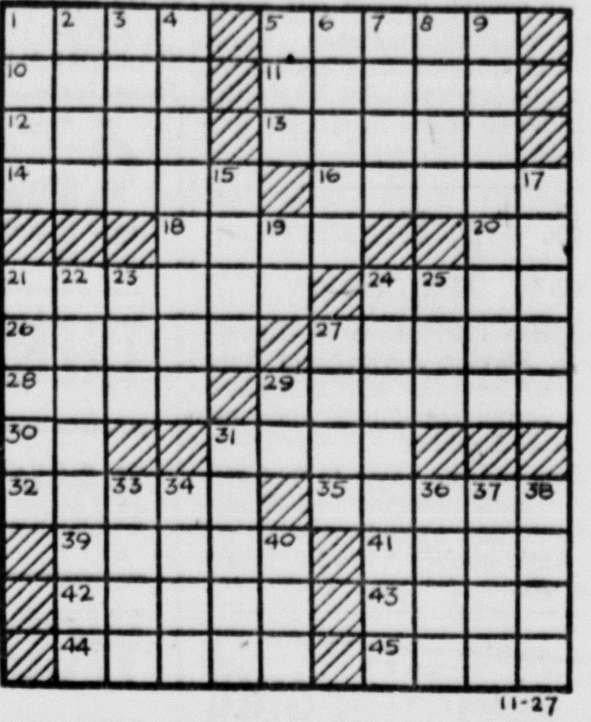

Bratton lost the title last May to Gavilan in New York and is eager to prove that when he is in shape he can handle the Cuban bolo punch man.

Grafters Lashed By New Boss Of Democrat Party

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—Frank E. McKinney, new Democrat Party national chairman, last night denounced grafters in government as "political parasites" who are both public enemies and foes of his party.

McKinney delivered his first major speech, since he was named on Oct. 31 to replace William M. Boyle Jr., at the annual fund raising dinner of the national committee in New York.

President Truman, in a message to the dinner, asked that the party be made "morally strong" in preparation for the 1952 campaign.

"In my opinion, 99.9 per cent of those entrusted with public office are honest and incorruptible. The few who do not measure up to these standards must be exposed and punished relentlessly. I am ready to help, and what is more important, Harry S. Truman is ready to help. The Democratic Party is determined that no malefactor in public office shall go unpunished."

Should Kohler, whose father was also governor and an extraordinarily wise man, permit himself to be used in this manner, it will not destroy McCarthy. It will engender enough bitterness to make McCarthy a persecuted hero and Kohler an instrument of the persecution.

Most of those who speak eloquently about the Republican Party in the press have no contact with its rank and file. They speak from the aloofness of men and women who have helped the party achieve four unnecessary defeats. Their judgments no longer influence active partisans who will be convention delegates.

U.S. Industrial Activity Slows

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—The National Association of Purchasing Agents reported today in its monthly survey that industrial activity declined during November. This reversed an uptrend noted in the two preceding months.

According to the association, there was a decline in the backlog of orders, while production lagged behind the order position. The survey said that demand may continue to decline as civilian product manufacturers adjust schedules to reduce allotments of controlled materials.

Horton Smith Slated To Get Top PGA Post; Big Tourneys Pondered

CHICAGO, Nov. 27—Horton Smith, top golfer now turned executive, probably will be elected president of the Professional Golfers' Association today and on his own admission certainly will not lack for funds.

The PGA presumably could apply for Marshall Plan money since it does business on an international front, but as long as so-called rugged individualists like George S. May of Chicago and John Jay Hopkins of Washington, D. C., are around that apparently will not be necessary.

May has guaranteed the PGA $100,000 for his two-week "All-American" and "World Championship of Golf" tournament at Tam C'Shanter next August and Hopkins has come up with a liberal offer for a Canadian vs. U. S. golf pro team tournament beginning next summer.

The Hopkins offer has intriguing angles. The wealthy industrialist is president of the Electric Boat Co. and head of the Canadair Air Line.

HE PROPOSES a match model after the British vs. American Ryder Cup tournament pitting two teams involving the cream of the crop.

But since Canada has only a few top world players, Ken Murray, head of the Canadian PGA, has suggested that Canada draw on the best golfers in the British empire for inclusion on its 10-man team.

Hopkins has guaranteed that he will pay each of the 20 men playing on the U. S. and Canadian teams $500 in addition to all expenses traveling to the tournament point.

Hopkins has suggested September as the date of the first Canadian vs. U. S. match—just two weeks after the Tam O'Shanter venture.

Since most of the boys will be in America anyway at the Tam tournaments they will be almost in commuting distance of Montreal, which

Learn To Ski Weeks Booked

LAKE PLACID, Nov. 27—A new kind of "learn to ski" week—one in which a whole community takes part—has been established at Lake Placid.

Hotels, inns, houses, transportation companies, ski-to operators and skating rink officials all are cooperating in putting on three "learn to ski" weeks at this Adirondack vacationland. Dates for the three periods will be Dec. 15-23, Jan. 5-27 and Feb. 24-March 31.

Grafters Lashed By New Boss Of Democrat Party

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—Frank E. McKinney, new Democrat Party national chairman, last night denounced grafters in government as "political termites" who are both public enemies and foes of his party. He foreshadowed punishment for such offenders.

McKinney delivered his first major speech, since he was named on Oct. 31 to replace William M. Boyle Jr., at the annual fund raising dinner of the national committee in New York.

President Truman, in a message to the dinner, asked that the party be made "morally strong" in preparation for the 1952 campaign.

"In my opinion, 99-10 per cent of those entrusted with public office are honest and incorruptible. The few who do not measure up to these standards must be exposed and punished relentlessly. I am ready to help, and what is more important, Harry S. Truman is ready to help. The Democratic Party is determined that no malefactor in public office shall go unpunished."

U.S. Industrial Activity Slows

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—The National Association of Purchasing Agents reported today in its monthly survey that industrial activity declined during November. This reversed an uptrend noted in the two preceding months.

According to the association, there was a decline in the backlog of orders, while production lagged behind the order position. The survey said that demand may continue to decline as civilian product manufacturers adjust schedules to reduce allotments of controlled materials.

Mills Bros. Circus Set For Winter

Free Show Every Saturday Offered

Youngsters over in Greenville are having a great time—just as much fun as Circleville kids enjoyed a couple of years ago.

There is a free, honest-to-goodness circus in Greenville every Saturday afternoon.

It is all because the Mills Bros. Circus, which once wintered in Circleville, has set up its off-season quarters in Greenville this year.

The first program of the "big top" was held Nov. 17 under the wooden top of a huge stock pavilion on Darke County Fairgrounds. Seven elephants, 24 horses, dog acts and a dozen or more ponies performed in the ring.

"Kiddies won't have to peek under the tent or try to slip in," says Fred Stafford, circus representative. "They can walk right in and take seats high or low along both sides of the pavilion."

The circus people also fixed up a menagerie. They have rhinos, monkeys, baboons, an albino leopard, black bear, llama, wintoka or swiss goat and mules.

JACK MILLS, manager, is away from Winter quarters now to buy more animals such as elephants, camels, bears, lions and tigers.

"The free shows are part of our way of thanking the people of Greenville and the surrounding Miami Valley for providing the excellent Winter quarter for us," Stafford said.

There are no concessions or food stands, or other money-making setups.

"We spent last Winter at the Ohio state fairgrounds, but missed having people visit us," Stafford said. "The public was not allowed to come and go freely there. For years we wintered in Circleville, but we outgrew our quarters. We were jammed up."

The circus purchasing agent, Kirk Taylor, says the show's animals consume five tons of hay a day, and it's purchased from farmers around Greenville. He said that's why the circus winters up north, because hay and feed are cheaper. Down south the hay has to be shipped in, Taylor said.

Living quarters are in the coliseum's basement for the 30 to 40 employees who run the Winter quarters. A wardrobe department is being established in another building.

Some of the performers (aerialists, acrobats and clowns) are in Cuba with another show now, but they'll converge on Greenville early in the Spring, about two weeks before the show goes on the road.

Missing from the circus scene here are the large expanses of canvas.

"EACH YEAR we cut off the ropes and save the poles, but sell the canvas tents for rags," Taylor said. "The next Spring we start out

9 Jurors OK'd For Death Trial

COLUMBUS, Nov. 27—Nine jurors are tentatively seated in the first-degree murder trial of Kenneth Bolding, 18, accused slayer of Virginia Bates, ex-wave.

Three more jurors and an alternate will be seated today in Columbus.

Bolding, who was 17 when Miss Bates was killed in a robbery attempt last Dec. 4, is accused of the slaying along with Frank Branch, 19, of Columbus. They are being tried separately and Branch is now undergoing a second sanity test in Lima state hospital.

Driver Accused Of Manslaughter

COLUMBUS, Nov. 27—James Manown of Dayton today is under $500 bond following his innocent plea to second degree manslaughter charges in the traffic death of Mrs. Elizabeth Lucas of Columbus last Thursday.

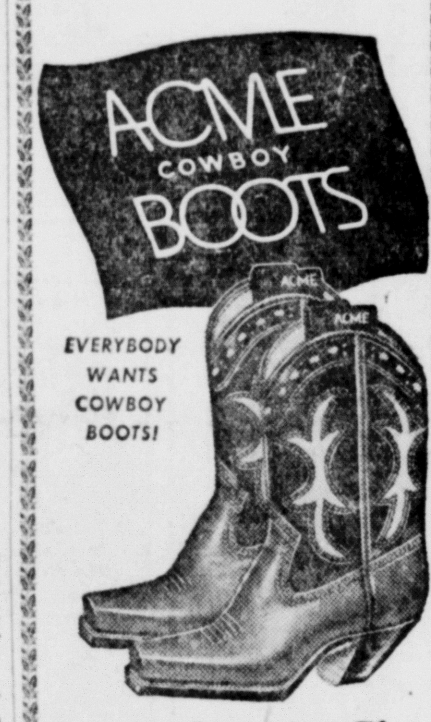

Manown's case was continued until Dec. 14. Police reported he crashed a stop sign.

with all new flame-proof and mildew proof canvas.

Even a week before the first free show here, when the circus was trying to get unscrambled and arranged in Winter quarters, some 5,000 people jammed the fairgrounds to welcome the show people.

"That's the way we hope it will be all Winter," circus officials said. It will be—Circleville knows.

National Health Chiefs Boom Use Of Fluorine

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—Health officials today are drafting a program designed to sell the public on the money-saving benefits of adding fluorine to public water supplies to reduce tooth decay.

The proposal is one of a series under consideration by the 50th annual conference of the Association of State and Territorial Health Officers in Washington.

Dr. John W. Knutson, chief of the U. S. Public Health Service's dental division, told more than 100 delegates at yesterday's opening session that only 138 of the nation's 16,750 public water supplies use the process.

Yet, he said, water fluoridation "can assure a two-thirds reduction in the incidence of tooth decay."

Moreover, he added, one dollar spent for fluoride would save $60 to $70 in dental care. He called this "a very conservative estimate."

THE ASSOCIATION endorsed the method at its 1950 meeting and now is looking for a way to promote its merits.

The association is being asked by the Public Health Service to urge state and territorial health departments to expand their promotional and educational programs.

Knutson told the health officials that 80 of the 138 communities using fluoridation started the process during the last year.

He commented: "At an annual rate of 100 communities a year, instead of last year's record of 80, it will require 150 years to do the job."

Knutson said Wisconsin is in the forefront of states using the fluoridation technique, with 60 of the state's 300 public water supplies adapted to it.

The official called on state health departments to press for fluoridation of one-third of the community water supplies under their jurisdiction during the next year.

Dental Group Hears Taft

CLEVELAND, Nov. 27—Panel discussions feature today's session of the Ohio State Dental Association convention in Cleveland.

Some 3,300 members of the group yesterday heard Charles P. Taft of Cincinnati, Republican aspirant for governor, level a verbal blast at "old line" socialists, branding them "more dangerous to our way of life than Communists."

Taft said that the contention that the gap between the rich and poor in this country is increasing is untrue, adding that "the gap in this country is the smallest of any nation."

Cleveland Slow On Wage Boost

CLEVELAND, Nov. 27—Cleveland city councilmen have agreed to take a "hands off" policy for one month on pay boosts for city employees.

Mayor Thomas A. Burke asked councilmen to take this action at a special two-party caucus before the regular council session last night.

In explaining the move, Burke said that salary boosts beyond the city's present financial capacities would mean either layoffs or new taxes.

U.S. Ag Exports Show Increase

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—The Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations said total U. S. agricultural exports during September were valued at $305 million.

Farm imports came to $331 million. Exports represented a 21 percent increase over September of 1950 while imports were 16 percent below those of a year ago.

Soil Service, PMA To Merge Here Friday

The offices of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service and the local soil conservation district will move Friday into quarters occupied by the Production and Marketing Administration in the Farm Bureau home at 159 East Main street.

The move is in line with a directive by the U. S. Secretary of Agriculture, the purpose of which is to coordinate more closely the services of the SCS and PMA.

Permanent farm conservation practices for which payments are accepted by PMA participants are, in the future, to be planned by the SCS which will also give all necessary technical help in establishing permanent practices.

While the preparation of complete farm conservation plans will continue to be the chief objective of the SCS, those desiring but one or two practices only, are to be given needed assistance.

Twenty Models of Other Makes of Cars Cost More!

There are hundreds of thousands of people who should be intensely interested in what we are writing here.

They are the people who paid more for their cars than a Cadillac costs—and still didn't get a Cadillac.

You see—there are five manufacturers of motor cars who produce a total of twenty models which actually cost more than the lowest-priced Cadillac. And during recent years, hundreds of thousands of people have taken title to these higher-priced models.

Surely, a large percentage of these owners did not understand, at the time of purchase, how little a Cadillac can cost. They assumed that a Cadillac must cost more—because of its reputation. So they paid for a Cadillac—and still failed to get the things a Cadillac provides.

They failed to get the irresistible performance of its great master high-compression engine... the soft, gliding ride that makes every road a better road... and the wonderful prestige which marks the Cadillac owner, throughout the civilized world, as a man distinctly apart.

Surely, they won't want to miss all this again. It's a lot to lose—especially when it costs no more to have it.

If we already have your order for a Cadillac—please be assured that you have made a wise decision—and stand firm until your car is ready for delivery.

But if we don't have your order—better come in and see us today. We are certain you don't want to pay the price of a Cadillac—and still not get one!
